

Austria: Vienna Declaration on human rights for older persons adopted at global meeting

GENEVA (16 November 2018) – The UN Independent Expert on the enjoyment of all human rights by older persons – Rosa Kornfeld-Matte hails the adoption of the Vienna Declaration on the Human Rights of older persons during the international conference on the human rights of older persons held on 12 and 13 November 2018 in Vienna, Austria. She commends the Austrian government and the Federal Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs for the leadership and initiative in convening this conference.

The Declaration is part of ongoing international efforts to strengthen the rights of older people in the wake of a demographic revolution. It was endorsed by consensus by a multi-stakeholder group comprising representatives of Government authorities, the academia and civil society as well as others working on the rights of older persons and older persons themselves.

“The Vienna Declaration is an important step towards articulating the quest for more rights protection of the invisible and voiceless older population. It is an essential contribution to the ongoing discussions on normative elements by the intergovernmental United Nations Working Group on Ageing.”

“Furthermore, the Declaration also recognizes the impact that the new technologies will have on older people. Digitalization and technological tools can serve as an opportunity to help older persons maintain or strengthen their capabilities and enable them to live autonomous, independent and dignified lives. However, we must ensure that opportunities do not become challenges and guarantee that all older persons are able to fully benefit from technologies.” “Older persons must therefore be involved in the design, provision and monitoring of the use of technologies.”
